

Table of contents

1. Introduction	3
2. Theoretical framework	3
2.1. Definition	4
2.2. Mechanisms of change	5
2.2.1. Neoanalysis (reanalysis) and analogization (analogy)	5
2.2.2. General mechanisms of change: (uni)directionality, the notion of extravagance, and the role of frequency	6
2.2.3. Semantic mechanisms of change: reduction and expansion of meaning and the loss-and-gain model	8
2.3. The conventionalization of go -futures	9
2.3.1. The conventionalization of the future semantics in ‘ BE going to INF ’ in English	10
2.3.2. The conventionalization of the future semantics in ‘ ALLER INF ’ in French	12
2.4. The contact hypothesis and contact-induced language change	14
2.5. Hypotheses	16
3. Methodology	19
3.1. The corpus	19
3.1.1. Corpus collection	19
3.1.2. Corpus engineering	20
3.2. Experimental set-up	24
4. Discussion of results	25
4.1. General observations in go -constructions (Hypothesis 1)	25
4.2. Observations in context parameters (Hypotheses 2, 3, 4)	33
4.2.1. (Non-)motion	33
4.2.2. Animacy	37
4.2.3. Intentionality	39
4.2.4. Predictiveness	41
4.2.5. Voice	43
4.3. Binary logistic mixed effects regression analyses (Hypothesis 5)	46
5. Limitations	47
6. Conclusion	48
7. Future research	49
8. Acknowledgements	50
References	51
Appendix 1. Texts included in the corpus and their corpora of origin
Appendix 2. Used Regex queries (Regular Expressions)	